Strategy Objective

The Nexus Global Dynamic Portfolio is an actively managed, globally diversified, equity portfolio. The manager has the mandate to seek value globally and is not constrained by a benchmark.

Investment Process

The Nexus Global Dynamic Portfolio is an actively managed, globally diversified, equity portfolio. The manager has the mandate to seek value globally and is not constrained by benchmarks. Stock selection is driven by a firm understanding of an individual company's underlying business fundamentals and how they relate to an ever-changing world. It is important to consider the interplay of monetary and fiscal policies around the world and how significant changes in these policies may affect equity markets. High conviction ideas are generated by a combination of internal and external research and quantitative and technical analysis. Owning equities and investing in the stock market allows an investor to participate in the future growth of the world. A diversified and liquid portfolio of equities will benefit in an ever-changing and growing world economy, where innovation and technological advances continue to drive new investment opportunities. One of our objectives is to identify future trends and themes using our internal analytical capability and to find ways to allow the Dynamic Portfolio to participate.

Market Commentary

The month in which the U.S. and Iran signed an MoU outlining a path to peace also saw the weakest equity returns since the war began, as chipmakers paused after strong gains in April and May. Nevertheless, U.S. and Japanese equities led quarterly performance, supported by continued AI-driven strength.

Bond markets were calmer in June, with yields drifting lower after March's energy-driven rise. The ECB raised rates by 25bps but struck a measured tone, while the BoE and Fed left policy unchanged and reiterated their commitment to controlling inflation. New Fed Chair Kevin Warsh proved less dovish than expected, but maintained a steady policy stance.

Falling oil prices helped lower yields as markets anticipated reduced disruption in the Strait of Hormuz. However, shipping volumes remain below pre-war levels, suggesting risks persist. Gold, silver and bitcoin weakened alongside a stronger US dollar as markets shifted from expecting rate cuts to considering further tightening.

Looking ahead, AI investment remains a key driver of economic growth and equity markets, supported by strong demand for computing power and rapid growth at firms such as Anthropic and OpenAI. Improving business investment and credit growth are also supporting earnings and labour market resilience.

The main challenge for markets is how central banks respond to stronger growth while inflation remains above target. Although near-term rate hikes appear unlikely, we expect upward pressure on longer-term yields from rising debt issuance, fiscal deficits, defence spending and investment requirements across key sectors. Consequently, bond returns may remain constrained and provide less diversification than in the past.

We continue to favour defence and energy exposure. While a broader Middle East conflict has been avoided, U.S.-Iran relations remain fragile and energy supply disruption remains a risk. With geopolitical tensions unresolved and U.S. midterm elections approaching, we expect market volatility to remain elevated in the months ahead.

Important: the value of investments and the income from them can go down as well as up. You may not recover what you invest.
